CLIMATIC INFLUENCE OF INDIAN OCEAN Topic - ON INDIAN PENINSULAR

India's monsoon season normally occurs from June to September when winds blow from the south-west direction. Then, between October and December, the winds normally shift and blow from the other direction. But climate change is disturbing this seasonal type. The Indian Ocean Dipole (IOD) is a very important factor to change this direction. Due to IOD some areas of Indian subcontinent are affected by the drought and Flood.

TOPIC - Ocean currents of the Atlantic,
Indian & Pacific ocean.

DATE 20/2/21

Ocean currents are the continuous, predictable, directional movement of sea water driven by gravity, wind (Coriolis Effect), & water density.

Ocean current moves in 2 directions - Horizontally & Vertically.

Horizontal movements are referred to as currents, while vertical movements are called upwellings/downwellings. This abiotic system is responsible for the transfer of heat, variations in biodiversity, & Earth's climate.
